CONCEPT

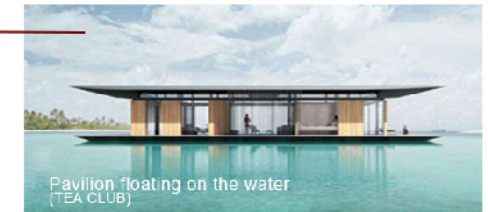

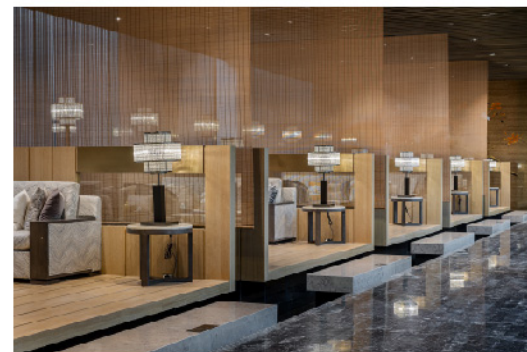

SECTIONAL VIEW A A'

UNBOUNDED

The designer chooses glass as the key material for façade of the basement to let the natural light go into the interior space directly through glass. This design realizes good lighting and solves the problem of lighting shortage in the basement. The design also breaks the boundary of interior and exterior space to realize blending and interaction of interior and exterior space and a transparent visual experience for residents.

In the design process, the designer hoped that the waterscape can present the mirror effect. In the courtyard the designer designed a staircase step, which we combined with the waterscape. In the whole design, the landscape architecture and interior are interconnected, making the interior and interior space an integrated design.

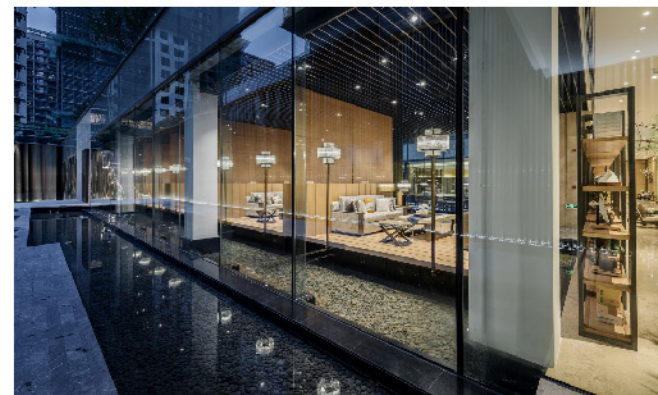

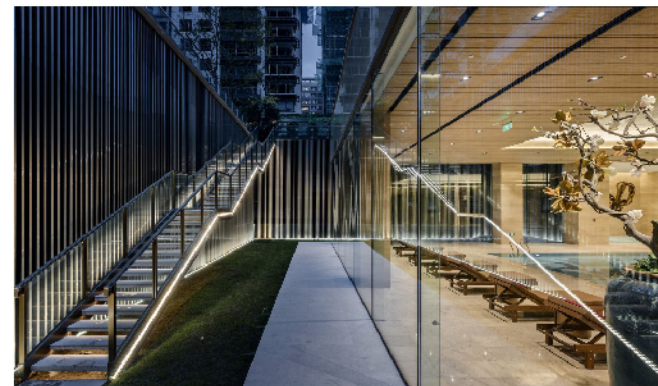

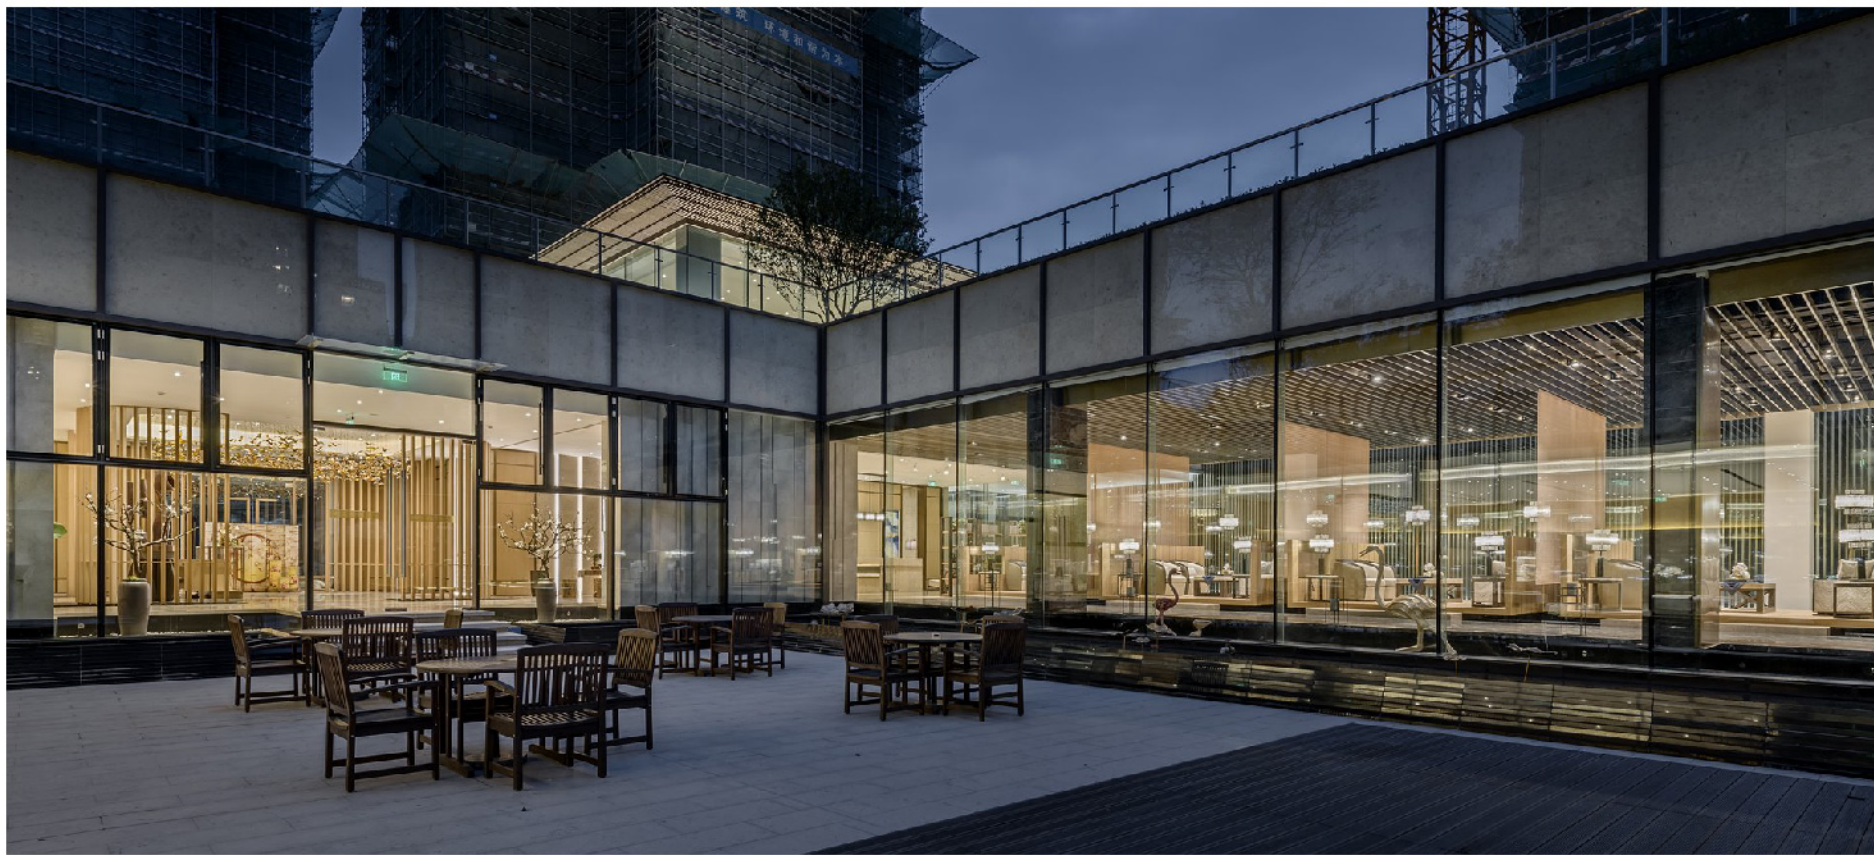

The design of the flower under the pool echoes the Chinese bonsai on the shore. The interior murals and artistic ornaments reveal the charm of the New Oriental. The designer integrates the Chinese design elements into the pool design and uses the floor-to-ceiling glass for a large area. The interior is connected to the outdoor, in addition to the outdoor grille that echoes the oriental charm of the interior, the design of the entire glass curtain wall is also particularly transparent.

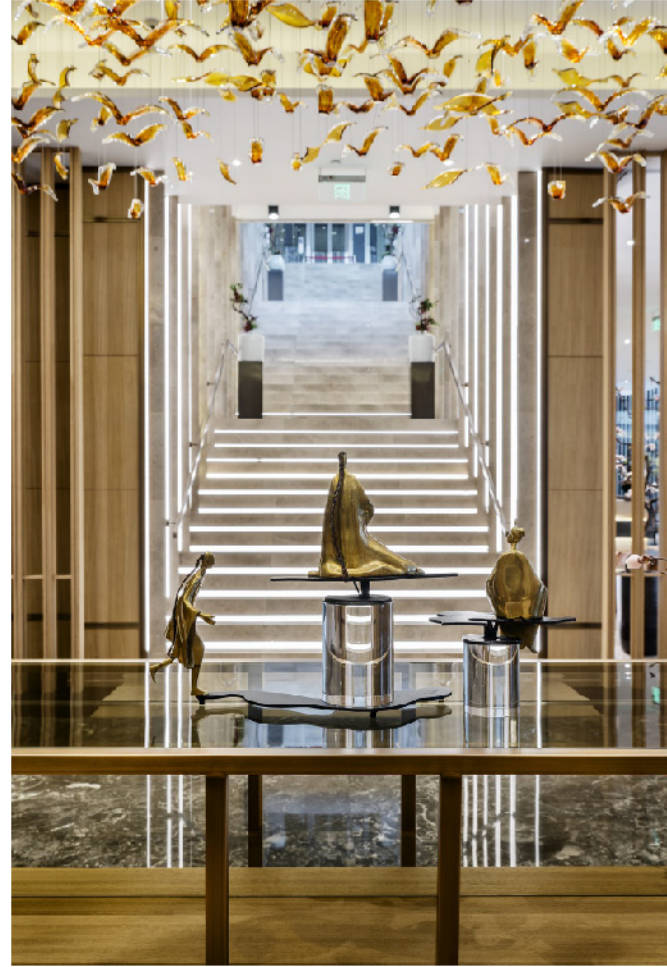

The main lamp is made of flying birds, which makes people feel a sense of vitality and transparency.

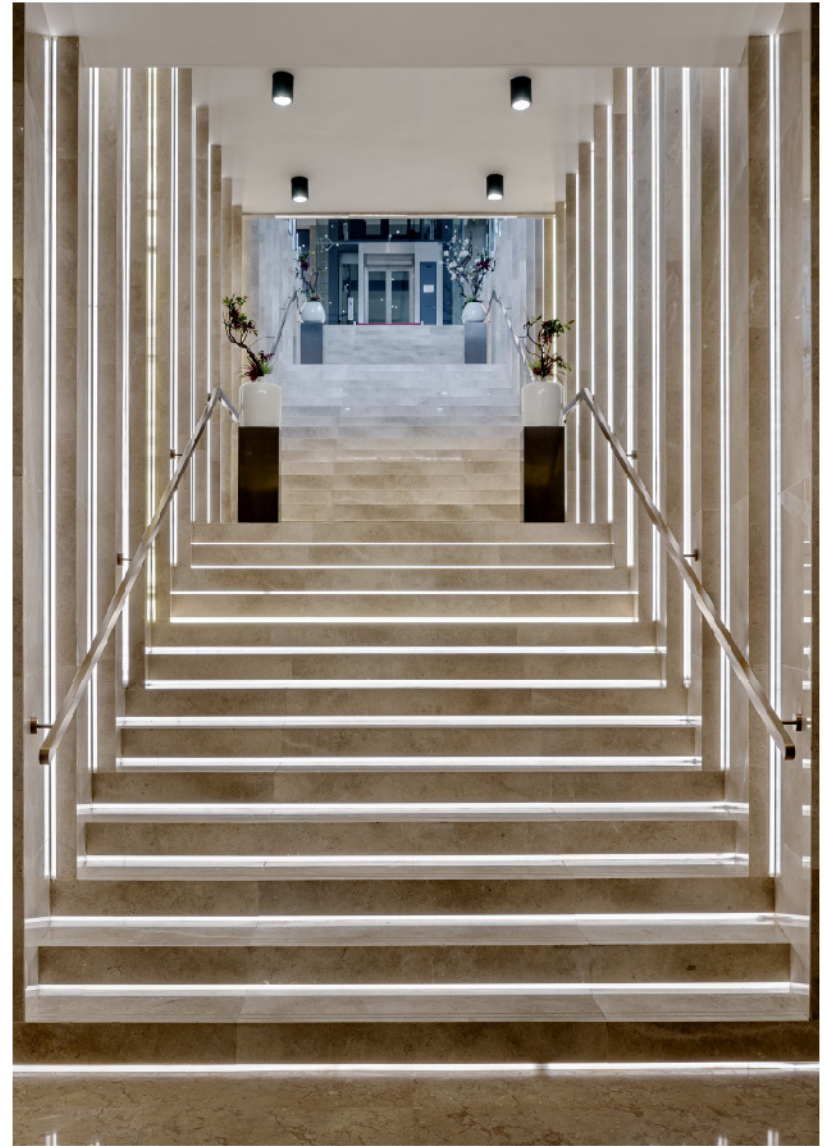

This design mainly wants to make customers feel a different feeling about the new living space, so as to create a better space life. It is a residential area of the club house, hope to give people the place of family reunion, the functional sex of the club is the solution of three generations of demand, also want to time over the weekend, and have their own leisure space.
